Abstract	This collaborative research and development project between Bern University of Teacher Education (PHBern) and the Faculty of Education of Antioquia University in Medellín, Colombia is part of the programme of the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation “North-South Partnerships in Teacher Education”, managed by the Swiss foundation éducation21. The overall project “Global Learning/ Planetary Pedagogy and Social Space” explores in a comparative and interdisciplinary cross-border setting theoretical and analytical approaches and practices of Global (planetary) Learning in the context of sustainable development claims. It comprises research, teaching, student mobility, and public guest lectures, and collaborates with former alumni and now in-service teachers. Inspired by de-colonial, post-colonial and critical theories the project seeks to contribute to collaborative, transcultural, and power sensitive knowledge production.
